Handbook for Nonviolent Campaigns: second edition

Also available in Spanish

The Handbook for Nonviolent Campaigns is a toolbox of ideas, written by 30 activists from all over the world. It includes articles about strategic campaigning, a wider variety of case studies, and exercises to help people running nonviolence trainings. There is material looking at building movements, conflict and power, incorporating gender awareness into campaigns, activism in oppressive regimes, and building movement capacity and strength. The Handbook contains contributions from a wide spread of countries, and from every continent.

The book is split into five main sections: introduction to nonviolence, developing strategic campaigns, organising effective nonviolent action, case studies, and training & exercises. There is also a glossary, and an extensive list of other resources.

Conscientious Objection: A Practical Companion for Movements

Conscientious Objection: A Practical Companion for Movements has been written by and for activists from all over the world who are campaigning against war, militarism, and all kinds of injustice. It's full of ideas to help groups work together, deal with power dynamics, surmount the external challenges they face, and enhance the concept of conscientious objection, using it in new and innovative ways – like resistance to war profiteering, or the militarisation of youth.

The book pays particular attention to the question of gender and the often invisible role of gender, both in the war machine and in the movements that oppose it. We believe this is the first book of its kind, we know it has lots of original content, and we hope it will become an invaluable resource in the worldwide peace movement.

Sowing Seeds: The Militarisation of Youth and How to Counter It

Around the world children, adolescents, and young adults encounter the military and military values in a variety of ways, from visits to schools by military personnels, to video games and the presence of the military and its symbols in public places. Young people are encouraged to see the military as necessary and valuable; something to be supportive of, not to question.

Through articles, images, survey data and interviews, Sowing Seeds: The Militarisation of Youth and How to Counter It documents the seeds of war that are planted in the minds of young people in many different countries. However, it also explores the seeds of resistance to this militarisation that are being sown resiliently and creatively by numerous people. We hope the book will help to disseminate these latter seeds. It is not just a book for peace and antimilitarist activists: it is a book for parents and grandparents, teachers, youth workers, and young people themselves.

Women Conscientious Objectors - An Anthology

Also available in Spanish

"This anthology is much, much more than a mere round-up of experience of women in the movement for men's conscientious objection to obligatory military service. It is more, even, than an account of women's struggle against their own conscription. For what we see here is women, at different moments, in one country after another, creating for themselves the concept, analysis and practice of a distinctive feminist antimilitarism. Starting from a focus on soldiering, they soon notice that militarisation is not just the existence of armies. It penetrates and deforms daily life in myriad ways. All of us are militarised, all of us can be conscientious objectors. As Ferda Ülker of Turkey puts it in her declaration, 'As much as militarism is determined to affect my life, I am determined to continue my struggle. I reject!'"

War is a Crime against Humanity: The Story of The War Resisters' International

War Resisters' International was formed in reaction to the slaughter of the first World War with a mission not only to oppose all war but also to strive to eradicate its causes. Embodying the addition of a political dimension to the moral and religious basis of pacifism, it attracted some of the world's best pacifist thinkers and activists, amongst them George Lansbury, Mahatma Gandhi, Bertrand Russell, Bayard Rustin, Martin Niemöller and Danilo Dolci.

The contributions of such figures and the heroism of the thousands who refused to co-operate with their government's war apparatus are chronicled in this book. Devi Prasad worked with Mahatma Gandhi from 1942 to 1947 and participated in the nonviolent social reform movements in India from independence onwards. He was General Secretary of the WRI from 1962-72.

Nonviolent Struggle and Social Defence

In April 1990, War Resisters' International, in conjunction with the International Fellowship of Reconciliation and the University of Bradford School of Peace Studies, organised a conference on "Nonviolent Struggle and Social Defence". Most of the articles in this book were contributed at the conference. Talks by Petra Kelly, Jean-Marie Muller, Gene Sharp and Marko Hren addressed the potential role of people's power in developing non-military security policies. Contributors from Chile and China to Czechoslovakia, from the Philippines to Fiji, from Palestine to Poland, from Guatemala, India and South Africa discuss their recent experiences either of people's power or of state repression.

The second half of the book - Social Defence: Arguments and Actions - was written by Brian Martin after the conference. "There are some superb academic studies, and there are numerous insights to be found in a wide range of books and articles", says Brian Martin, "but there really needs to be some practical introduction."
